Five-Year Plan

Janquilyn Merida, MS, FNP-C

Doctor of Nursing Practice Candidate

Texas Woman's University

School of Nursing

It has been my privilege to embark on this tremendous adventure in the inaugural DNP cohort. I have amassed a wealth of knowledge by embracing all the courses in the curriculum. I would like to applaud the faculty for making this milestone possible. My five year plan follows.

Year One:

- Attain an adjunct faculty position and teach in a college program.
- Become active in North Texas Nurse Practitioners by attending meetings at least quarterly.

Year Two:

- Become involved at the state level by attending the annual Texas Nurse Practitioner conference after a 3 year hiatus secondary to doctoral education.
- Submit an article for publication.

Year Three:

- Become involved at the national level by attending the Doctor of Nursing Practice conference.
- Consider running for an office in North Texas Nurse Practitioners.

Year Four:

- Submit an article for publication.

Year Five:

- Consider a full-time position in nursing education.
- Consider going on international health care missions.
